This guide mainly focuses on gathering information for Cultural Industries, with the intention that it is useful for the identification of aids and calls to the sector.

PART I: DOCUMENT STRUCTURE

This document gathers the initiatives of support and incentives directed to the sector of cultural industries.

Part II of the document includes a list of specific aids for the sector, distinguishing between possible topics, in which each aid or call is identified, and subsequently, in the corresponding section each one is developed in greater depth. You can access the detail of each aid from the aid's sheet link.

The list of calls is classified as follows:

The list of calls is classified as follows:

- Aids to the Audiovisual Industry
- Aids to Shows and Cultural and Creative Industry
- Aids to Modernization and Enrichment of Bibliographic Heritage

As a complement to the above information, information has been collected taking into account the geographical coverage of the aid, at levels:

- European
- State.
- Autonomic

In Part III of the document, are presented the available aids for the cultural industries sector, whose application period is open at the time of writing of this monograph, as well as a series of grants for which the call has been published annually for a long , indicating the period in which it is foreseen that the next call for the year 2019 may be published, according to the information provided by the managing body itself..

To do this, an individual sheet has been created for each of the aids identified, which can be consulted one by one. The content of each sheet is structured as follows:

Name of the call

The name of each specific call is included.

Objective of the call

Includes a summary of the purpose for which the aid was intended and what problems or challenges is trying to solve or face.

Type of aid

Specifies the financial aid governing mode. For example, if it were repayable grants, loans, or even if you can combine both alternatives and/or some other form.

Beneficiaries

It refers to the type of entities that can submit applications: consortia and joint ventures, sole proprietorship, corporation, other (universities, technology or research centers, Government, NGOs, etc.).

Description of aid

Includes a more detailed description of the aid and which concepts and actions are financed. It also contains a summary regarding the requirements and characteristics to be fulfilled by the granted projects.

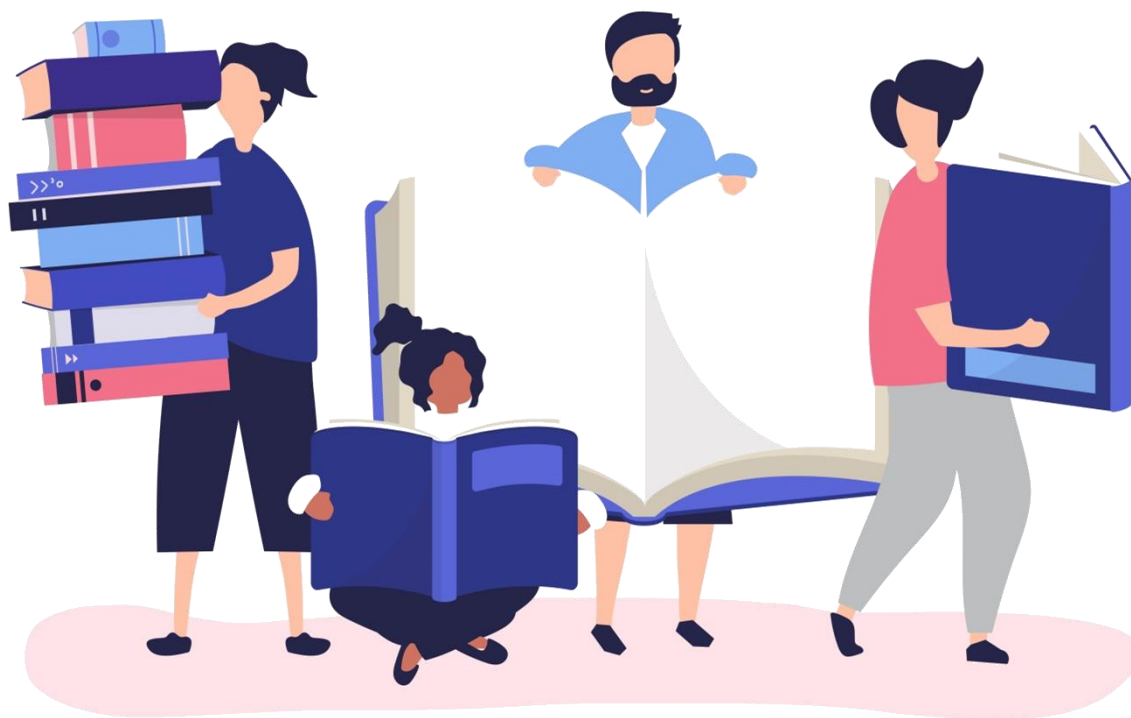

Term of the call

This point temporarily delimits the deadline for submissions and applications, indicating the starting and ending date of each call, also identifying whether the call is submitted on a single stage (single stage) or consists of several cutting dates (multiple cut-off).

Link for more information

The links redirect the reader to access the rules of the call, so that those interested in more information can consult it. (Bases, call, etc.).

There are several calls that even if they have not been designed specifically for the biotechnology sector, they can be useful for in the biotechnology area. They are generic aids for addressing employment, improving competitiveness and adoption of ICT issues. We strongly encourage the reader to check the document published by the ICEX portal InvestInSpain namely "Aid and incentives for hiring", as well as the "Monthly guidelines on current calls" published periodically in the InvestInSpain website. Furthermore, and taking into account that most of the specific calls related to the biotechnology industry are included under the European Union Horizon 2020 Program, we encourage the reader to consult the first part of the manual published by ICEX for submitting projects to be granted by the H2020 Program "Horizon 2020 Guide" which offers practical information on the operation of this Program.

Parte II.D. · Calls and aids cassified by geographical – Regional

In this section, given that at the time of publication of the document, there are few open-ended aids for the presentation of the application, it has been considered of interest to provide useful information for each CCAA, so that the information can be accessible to the interested in the moment in which the planned announcements are published.

It is fundamentally about the identification of the organisms responsible for the management and granting of this type of aid and incentives, as well as guidelines for selection in cases where it is a type of search engine.

In this way, the information related to open-ended grants is presented first, and then the general information already indicated.
